

LOCAL NEWS

GSP trooper shot twice after chase recovering in hospital

Johns Creek may build Georgia's first "Michigan Turn" intersection

via myAJC Cobb County quandary: Parents and school

See if you're eligible for the program. Cornell Executive MBA Americas — in Atlanta JOHNSON Cornell University Check Eligibility >

David Wickert The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

County will upgrade Gwinnett Place transit center

COMMENTS

9 27 a.m. Friday, Jan. 29, 2016 | Filed in Local News

my Photographer hits milestone for AJC Free access to myAJC for AJC subscribers. EXPLORE >

As The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reports, Gwinnett County may take several steps to boost redevelopment in the Gwinnett Place Mall area. Among them: creating a zoning overlay district that would allow buildings up to 25 stories and converting the intersection of Satellite Boulevard and Pleasant Hill Road into a large, park-like traffic circle.

But Gwinnett is already pushing another improvement that could be important to the area's future: Replacing the transit transfer station at Gwinnett Place Mall.

Last week the Gwinnett Board of Commissioners requested $12.4 million worth of state grants for a variety of transit projects. Among them: $1.8 million for the transfer station. The money would be matched by federal and county funding to pay for the $4.6 million project.

In its pitch to the state, the county notes plans for "higher-density residential, overlay districts, greenways and other precursors to transit-oriented development" in the Gwinnett Place area.

Gwinnett County is seeking a $1.8 million state grant to help replace a bus transfer center at Gwinnett Place.

The new transfer center could allow the county to expand bus service in the area.

That could include more local service or more express routes to destinations like the Emory/CDC area or Sandy Springs/Perimeter Center.

You can read more about efforts to redevelop the Gwinnett Place area here.

VIEW COMMENTS 0

Live On Stage NETWORKS pres. BEAU AND THE BEARS THE SMASH! BROADWAY MUS FEBRUARY 2-7 FOX THEATRE Get Tickets FIFTH THIRD BANK BROADWAY ATLANTA 35th ANNIVERSARY

promotions gun sales

Reut CT Gun Buy, Sell, Trade Like This Page April 3, 2015

Glock23 G4 $625

More videos:

