

LOCAL NEWS

5 things to know: Disabled woman denied tow because she supports...

Close to Home for May 7

Nuestra Comunidad: 'Children's Day' brings kids close to their roots

David Wickert The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

$1.8 million to improve Gwinnett sidewalks, intersections

f t e COMMENTS

12 00 p.m. Thursday, May 5, 2016 | Filed in: Local News

my

Gracie: Don't look for 'perfect' man, look for 3

Free access to myAJC for AJC subscribers.

EXPLORE

Gwinnett County will spend more than $1.8 million for sidewalk and intersection improvements in the Gwinnett Place area and near North Gwinnett High School.

The county Board of Commissioners Tuesday awarded two contracts to CMES for the projects.

The company will install sidewalks along Steve Reynolds Boulevard from Venture Drive to Shackelford Road. It also will improve the intersection of Pleasant Hill Road and Gwinnett Place Drive, providing access to Gwinnett Place Mall for southbound motorists on Pleasant Hill Road. The contract for both projects is $780,639.

CMES also won a $1.1 million contract to improve the intersection of Suwanee Dam Road and West Price Road, adjacent to North Gwinnett High School. The project includes a traffic signal and left turn lanes on West Price Road, plus curb and gutter and drainage improvements.

The projects will be paid for with money from special sales taxes approved by voters.

Gwinnett County commissioners approved a $780,639 contract to improve sidewalks and an intersection in the Gwinnett Place area. CURTIS COMPTON / CCOMPTON@AJC.COM

VIEW COMMENTS 12

More videos:

MOST READ

1. Questions arise about California doctor's response Prince
2. Disabled woman denied a tow because she supports Ben Sanders
3. 5 things to know: Disabled woman denied tow because she...