Gwinnett Place CID seeks participants from area in opinion survey

Now is your chance to share your opinion about Gwinnett Place by taking a survey. The Gwinnett Place Community Improvement District (GPCID) is inviting the wider community to participate in a market research survey to share perceptions of the Gwinnett Place area as well as shopping and dining patterns.

Survey feedback will be used to help with future planning and improvements, said Joe Allen, executive director of the Gwinnett Place CID. He adds: "More than 97,000 people live within three miles of Gwinnett Place, and 60,000 commuters work here, and their feedback is important as we work to establish it as a location where the workers and residents of Gwinnett Place stay to dine, shop and be entertained. We welcome feedback from the public."

The five-minute, anonymous online survey will be open to Gwinnett Place workers and residents through the end of the month, July 31. Please click here to participate.

Gwinnett Tech students win awards in National SkillsUSA competition

Gwinnett Tech students had an exceptional showing at National SkillsUSA, Post Secondary State Leadership and Skills Conference hosted in June in Louisville, Ky. Of the 18 Gwinnett Tech students who competed, six students placed. A total of six competition medals were earned; three gold and three silver.

The Gwinnett Tech 2017 national award winners were: Gold medalists: Tyler Butler – Extemporaneous Speech; Ben Nguyen – First Aid/CPR; and Heidy Sosa – Health Occupations, Professional Portfolio. Silver medalists were James (Jim) Johnson – Photography; Jonathan Kirkland – Medical Math; and Heather McBroom – Job Interview.

Gail Edwards, Gwinnett Tech's Skills USA Lead Advisor says, "This year, the College had more students compete than ever before and they all did an outstanding job. Our students' results at this competition continue to prove that their educational foundation is exceptional and that they can apply their learning in real-world situations."
