Board Officers Elected to Lead Gwinnett Place CID

(Duluth)—Annual elections were held Wednesday for the Board officers of the Gwinnett Place Community Improvement District at the organization’s regular monthly meeting.

Leo Wiener, a principal and partner with Glenwood Development Company, owner of Mall Corners shopping center on Pleasant Hill Road, was unanimously re-elected to serve as Chairman. Wiener has more than 15 years of experience in commercial real estate.

James Song, President of CRJ, Inc., was unanimously elected the GPCID’s Vice Chairman. Song has more than 30 years of experience in small business start-ups and management.

Mark Williams, President of Printing Trade Company, was also unanimously elected to serve as Secretary/Treasurer.

“I’m grateful for the unanimous show of support to remain as Chairman,” said GPCID Chairman Leo Wiener. “We’re accomplishing great changes to bring economic development of the area, and I’ll keep working for more progress.”

“Our CID continues to show unity in mission and consensus in leadership,” said Joe Allen, Executive Director of the GPCID. “Our Board will stay focused on our mission to bring economic development to Gwinnett’s central business district.”
